

Hinge Cutting

Overview

This technique opens the door to many habitat and forage alteration possibilities as there are many ways in which it can be implemented. While most property owners may consider this for their white-tailed deer, it benefits so much more. Rabbits, quail, and turkeys are just a handful of the species that can benefit from such practices.

We offer both hinge cutting consultations as well as implementing the practice in our list of services.

Wildland Systems extends our service in the implementation of the highly beneficial practice of hinge cutting. A comprehensive plan will be formed prior to work. This plan will be tailored to your property and needs. After which it is time to let the chainsaws get to work.

We are also happy to help out the landowner who desires to do the work themselves, but would like some guidance in this management practice. In this case we will carry out all the planning before handing the reins over to you.
